Lila is the third volume in Marilynne Robinson ' s Gilead trilogy. She published her first novel, Housekeeping, in 1979, published this in 2014, and so that is a four novel output in 35 years. She ' s no Joyce Carol Oates, putting out a book a year! I am reminded of James Joyce, though, thinking of that slow writing pace.

Lila by Marilynne Robinson - Goodreads

Lila is the third in a trilogy of stand-alone novels by Robinson, widely regarded as one of America ' s finest living writers, and winner of the Pulitzer and Orange Prizes for fiction. The story is delicately told from within the sparse but wide-ranging mind of Lila, an orphan wandering the woods in Ohio in the 1930s.

Marilynne Robinson ' s " Lila " | The New Yorker

" In her new novel, Lila, Marilynne Robinson has written a deeply romantic love story embodied in the language and ideas of Calvinist doctrine. She really is not like any other writer. She really isn't... Robinson has created a small, rich and fearless body of work in which religion exists unashamedly, as does doubt, unashamedly. "
